Hijab is basically a veil or the headscarf which is commonly used by Muslim women indicating a sign of modesty. Hijabs come in different shapes and sizes and can be customized based on your preference and comfort. The ones worn in the west are usually square and can be wrapped around the head keeping the face clear of any clothing.

There are hijabs of different lengths which cover the head, the neck and the back. Also known as khimar, it is a cape like version of the original hijab which is meant for more conservative women. Liberal women wear it is a part of their own faith.
