Summers can be stressful when it comes to picking out clothing. However, cotton dhoti and lungi has been a boon in disguise for men across the country. Dhoti is usually referred to a silk or cotton white fabric which is stitched at the ends giving you a breezy material which is essential for humid and hot summers. Lungi on the other hand is referred to colorful dhoti like fabric clothing which is usually adorned by men on special occasion which are informal in nature such as get together or otherwise. We are the renowned Supplier of a superior quality of Dhoti and Lungi at reasonable rate. The major difference between dhotis and lungis is basically the kind of texture of fabric and print. Dhotis, also known as mundu in Kerala is usually plain and is white. It can be in different shades and length too such as beige, off-white and the likes, but is usually plain and has a thinner fabric weave than lungi. We also offer an exclusive collection of Traditional Dhoti's that are available in various sizes colors and patterns.

Lungis tend to be thicker as they have a higher thread count and make it sturdier than the dhoti. Laze around in a lungi at your home and there wouldn't be anything more comfortable than that one. Pairing a dhoti or a lungi with t-shirt or a formal shirt is not unheard off and can add to the style quotient too.
