Haven't you been trying your mom's saree ever since childhood dreaming to own a pair of them all by yourself? Saree is the quintessential ethnic wear which unites the views of all women across the country.

Cotton, zardozi, silk, chiffon, georgette, so on and so forth have been accounted for the best materials over the years and it has been a favourite with the women as well. With different patterns and looks being experimented with, saree has been evolving over ages.

From being a traditional drape like clothing, it has been customised to add dhoti like tulle and textures which not only give it a contemporary look but also make it stand out above the rest. Accessorize with the right kind of jewellery and you wouldn't have to regret any look that you go for. Occasion does not call for choices anyway. Hone your best make-up and drape those 12 yards effortlessly to slay any event you walk into.

Quality of saree depends solely on the kind of weave and the thread count. Elaborate kanjeevarams or simple silk cotton; saree has been a nightmare for noobs. But, do you give into the fear? No, you try that saree out and secure it with a bunch of safety pins to avoid slippage or any mishaps.
